McNeely Technology Solutions Joins Global Relief Initiative Led by Aidmatrix Foundation

A global coalition of enlightened corporations & businesses committed to alleviating human suffering through innovative partnerships and technology – creating less waste, more aid and more hope for those in need.

DALLAS – June 14, 2006 – Today, former Wisconsin Governor and Aidmatrix CEO Scott McCallum welcomed McNeely Technology Solutions into membership in the Aidmatrix Foundation's GlobalReach Council. Members are united in their commitment to help connect aid with need worldwide and to re-purpose excess goods for humanitarian and disaster relief to alleviate suffering. In 2005, Aidmatrix mobilized over $1.5 billion in aid and relief, working with 35,000 fellow charities around the nation and the world. "Aidmatrix's goal is to help individuals, corporations and organizations manage their donations partnerships effectively, and make sure those donations have the maximum impact for those in need," said Accenture's David B. Rich, Aidmatrix Board Chair. "With millions of people impacted by this and other tragedies, people want their donations to make a difference."

McNeely Technology Solutions is proud to join leading technology corporations in participating in GlobalReach. Mary Elizabeth McNeely, President of McNeely Technology Solutions, notes that "Aidmatrix provides critical logistical and infrastructure support to many worthwhile charitable organizations, and we're quite pleased to help in this effort." As a GlobalReach member, McNeely Technology Solutions has provided both in-kind and financial donations to help Aidmatrix. In particular, the firm's assistance in Oracle database migration consulting has saved Aidmatrix approximately $30,000 and enabled the organization to provide enhanced systems to American Red Cross and the US Chamber of Commerce that would not have been financially feasible without this strategic donation of highly specialized skills.

“It’s the support from businesses across the technology spectrum that really make Aidmatrix work,” says Aidmatrix Foundation COO and CTO, Keith Thode. “Sponsorship from global technology firms like Dallas-based i2 Technologies, Sun Microsystems and Accenture serve as the foundation for strategic growth, and also provide opportunities for smaller, highly specialized firms such as McNeely Technology Solutions to make a critical difference for humanity. We are grateful for the vital technology assistance, and of course the financial support, from McNeely Technology Solutions.”

Aidmatrix is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to leveraging partnerships and technology to ensure that “the right aid gets to the right people at the right time™”. Aidmatrix takes industry leading supply chain business technology from organizations such as Accenture and i2 Technologies, and makes them available to the nonprofit world and their civic-minded corporate partners to increase efficiency and reduce waste in the delivery of humanitarian aid. Solutions are currently available for hunger relief, donations management, medical and health relief, general humanitarian aid delivery, fundraising and disaster relief.

Individuals and corporate representatives can make an immediate impact by donating through the Aidmatrix website at www.aidmatrix.org.
